Question:

How can I update graphics card drivers?

Answer:

Depending on the manufacturer of the integrated graphics card, you can download the current graphics card driver from the website of the manufacturer and install it by double-clicking.

You can determine the manufacturer and model in the following way:

- Click "Computer" with the right mouse button and select "Manage".
- Computer Management opens. Click "Device Manager" in the area on the left and expand the "Graphics card" entry in the area on the right.

If the model number starts with ATI, switch to AMD's website:
<http://www.amd.com>

If the model number starts with NVidia, switch to NVidia's website:
<http://www.nvidia.de>

Look for the link to the drivers on the website. Once you have found it, you need to select the drivers in accordance with the model number and operating system. Then you can download them and install them by double-clicking.

Please restart the computer before you install the graphics card drivers!

For NVidia graphics cards, you can select the "Automatically find drivers for my NVIDIA products" option to automatically find the correct drivers.

Notes:

If you have a laptop, it can happen that the manufacturer of the graphics card directs you straight to the website of the laptop manufacturer. If so, look for the current drivers there.

If the model name is "Chipset", the computer is equipped with an on-board graphics card. These integrated graphics are not suitable for CAD programs such as Allplan.
